FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

The Asian USD bond market (represented by the John Pierpont ("JP") Morgan Asia Credit Index) posted a gain of 0.55% in July. This positive return was driven by a combination of modest spread tightening and lower United States Treasury ("UST") yields.

UST yields started July on a weak note as controversy surrounding US President Trump's links to Russia compounded concerns over his administration's lack of progress on the promised reforms. Weaker-than-expected retail sales and inflation data also contributed to UST yield weakness. However, UST yields inched higher in the last week of July on the back of economic data pointing to sustained growth momentum in the US. The Federal Reserve's signal that it could start to normalise its balance sheet "relatively soon" in its statement also contributed to the upward movement in yields. Consequently, UST yields ended the month marginally lower, with the 2-year yield and the 10-year yield closing the month at 1.35% and 2.29% respectively.

Sovereign bonds outperformed over the month, led by Sri Lanka and Mongolia in the high yield sovereign bond space, and Indonesia in the investment grade sovereign bond space. Sentiment towards Sri Lankan bonds was lifted by news that the International Monetary Fund ("IMF") had approved a new disbursement to the country from its economic reform program. Demand for Indonesian sovereign bonds continue to be strong post its sovereign rating upgrade in May.

High yield corporate bonds outperformed investment grade corporate bonds in July in spite of the idiosyncratic news that affected some high yield issuers. Increased regulatory scrutiny on some Chinese issuers that have expanded aggressively overseas dragged on sentiment. On the other hand, commodity-related names drove outperformance in the high yield corporate sector.

Asian USD bonds have had a decent showing over the year-to-date period. Yield-seeking behavior was strong in Asia as investors generally brushed off macroeconomic and geopolitical concerns globally. Treasury return was also supported by declines in longer term UST yields on the back of soft inflation numbers.

Investor demand for yield helped to prop up the performance of high yield sovereign bonds which outperformed over the year. This was followed by investment grade sovereign bonds, which was driven higher by Indonesia following its sovereign rating upgrade by S&P. High yield corporate bond and investment grade corporate bonds performed largely in line with each other over the year-to-date period.
